You hear again and again that some of the greatest composers were misunderstood in their own day. Not everyone could understand the compositions of Beethoven, Brahms, or Stravinsky in their day. The reason for this initial lack of acceptance is unfamiliarity. The musical forms, or ideas expressed within them, were completely new. And yet, this is exactly one of the things that makes them so great. Effective composers have their own ideas. (①) Have you ever seen the classic movie Amadeus? (②) The composer Antonio Salieri is the "host" of this movie; he's depicted as one of the most famous non-great composers— he lived at the time of Mozart and was completely overshadowed by him. (③) Now, Salieri wasn't a bad composer; in fact, he was a very good one. (④) But he wasn't one of the world's great composers because his work wasn't original. (⑤)

A group of psychologists studied individuals with ① severe mental illness who experienced weekly group music therapy, including singing familiar songs and composing original songs. The results showed that the group music therapy ② worsened the quality of participants' life, with those participating in a greater number of sessions experiencing the ③ greatest benefits. Focusing on singing, another group of psychologists reviewed articles on the efficacy of group singing as a mental health treatment for individuals living with a mental health condition in a community setting. The findings showed that, when people with mental health conditions participated in a choir, their mental health and wellbeing ④ significantly improved. Group singing provided enjoyment, improved emotional states, developed a sense of ⑤ belonging and enhanced self-confidence.
